TRAIL & LOOKOUT GUIDE

To access all trails, follow the walkway from the Visitor Center and cross Hawk Mountain Road to begin at the entrance. TRAILS ARE ROCKY AND UNGRADED except the walk to South Lookout.

SOUTH LOOKOUT:

175 yards from Entrance Gate, the trail to this lookout is groomed and can be accessed by motorized wheelchairs as well as by manual wheelchairs with assistance. Below South Lookout is the River of Rocks, an Ice-Age boulder field. An observer-interpreter is stationed daily at South Lookout September through early November.

LOOKOUT TRAIL (orange blazes)

Vertical rise: 300 feet. The quickest trail to North Lookout (NLO) is the Lookout Trail. Alternatives are the Express Route, a steep shortcut often used for return descent, and the rocky difficult Escarpment Trail that follows the ridge edge. The North Lookout consists of large boulders that require rock scrambling to traverse. Spur trail connecting the Skyline Trail to the East Rocks Overlook is also marked with orange blazes.

The official counter is stationed at NLO in spring and autumn. On a clear day, the 200° panoramic view extends 70 miles. The series of folded mountains and valleys to the northwest is the Ridge-and-Valley Province of the central Appalachians. The Kittatinny is its most southeasterly ridge.

SILHOUETTE TRAIL (ACCESSIBLE) (green blazes)

This trail is wheelchair accessible and offers an alternative route to South Lookout. It is 900 feet long, and the grade does not exceed 8.3 %.

RIVER OF ROCKS TRAIL (red blazes)

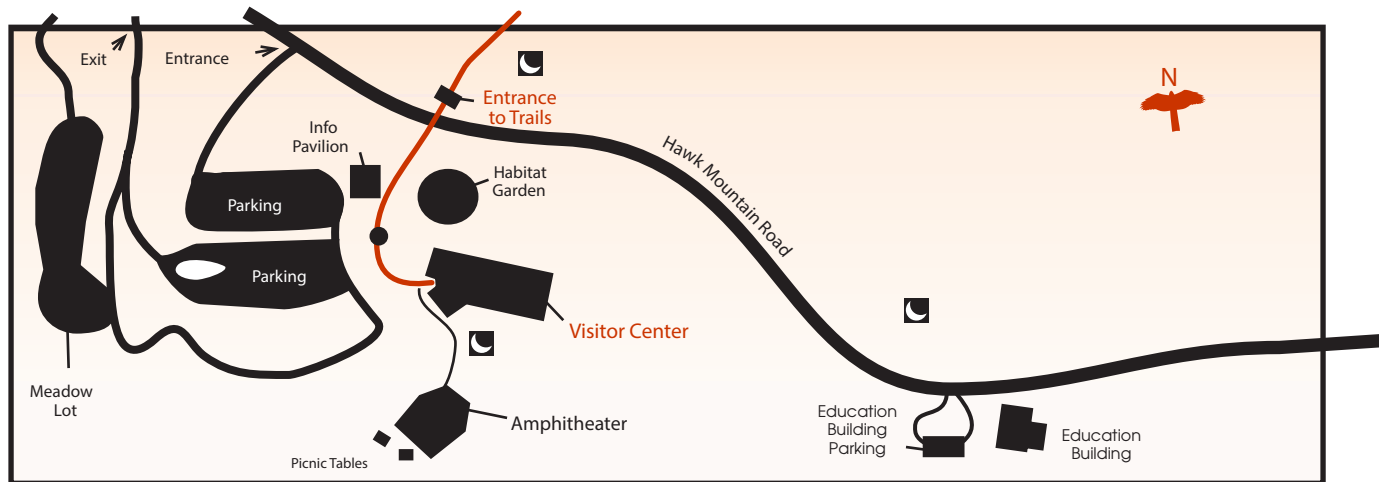

Vertical descent: 600 feet. Begin this trail by turning right just before South Lookout after 0.3 mile on the Lookout Trail. Allow 3-4 hours to complete loop. The loop trail is very rough and rocky. Several unmarked trails cross this trail; pay extra attention and follow the RED blazes.

SKYLINE TRAIL (blue blazes)

This rugged, ridgetop trail follows the spine of the Kittatinny eastward from North Lookout, with a spur trail to scenic East Rocks Overlook, and meets the Appalachian Trail 2.5 miles from NLO. Spur trail is marked with orange blazes. This difficult trail includes 4-point rock scrambling and is recommended only for experienced hikers—just off NLO is a 30-foot vertical descent. The trail is accessible via part of the Lookout Trail, Golden Eagle Trail, and River of Rocks Trail.

GOLDEN EAGLE TRAIL (yellow blazes)

Vertical rise: 800 feet. This trail connects the Skyline Trail (blue) with the River of Rocks Trail (red) and follows a steep grade.
